

Edi Simcic

Edi & Aleks Simcic

(AY-dee SEEM-chitch) (AHL-eks SEEM-chitch)

LOCATION

Goriška Brda, Slovenia.
(Town of Vipolže)
7.5 hectares. 90-160 meters.

ESTATE

Edi Simcic.
(AY-dee SEEM-chitch)

WINEMAKER

Edi & Aleks Simcic.
(AY-dee SEEM-chitch)
(AHL-eks SEEM-chitch)

ENOLOGIST

Aleks Simcic.
(AHL-eks SEEM-chitch)

ENVIRO-COMMITMENT

Hand-harvested.
No irrigation.

ESTATE PRODUCTION

2,500 cases.

PARTNERSHIP

Edi Simcic has been part of the Small Vineyards family since 2005.

When it comes to the winemaking style of Edi Simcic, one word comes to mind—controversial. Unlike many of the stainless-aged Italian wines available, even the white wines of Simcic are fermented and aged for long periods in oak, and are therefore almost French in style. Many top critics consider him to be the best winemaker in Slovenia. Third and fourth generation winemakers, he and his son Aleks produce in a fascinating zone, Goriška Brda, that up until the end of WWII belonged to Italia. (Today, the estate lies just 500 yards from the Friulian border.) In fact, when the Communist government first took power (1948) and Yugoslavia was created, the family's lifestyle was completely upended and turned on its head—suddenly, they were required to give a huge portion of their grapes to the government, and winemaking as they had known it came to an end. Edi even lost his girlfriend at the time, as she remained on the Italian side—so close and yet so far. Just five football fields away, young Edi found himself living in an extremely different world. Despite such staggering and life-altering setbacks, the Simcic clan has today risen to unprecedented heights. After the fall of the Iron Curtain in 1989, nothing, not even a hiatus lasting decades, could prevent this family from returning to what they do best... making wine. As we like to say, when you taste the wines of Edi Simcic, in a very real sense, you are getting a little taste of freedom.

Discovering the best hand-harvested, family-owned, earth-friendly Mediterranean wine.

www.svimports.com